

Orlando Sentinel

http://www.orlandosentinel.com/entertainment/music/orl-records12\_207jan12,0,1506473.story?coll=orl-calmusic1top

MUSIC REVIEW

Trent Summar and the New Row Mob

Horseshoes & Hand Grenades (Palo Duro)

Nick Cristiano

Posted January 12, 2007

Trent Summar co-wrote Jack Ingram's recent single, "Love You," a clever kiss-off in which "love" stands in for another four-letter word (it works better than it sounds).

Summar does his own version of the song here, and his second solo set has plenty more colorfully swaggering country-rockers like that one.

With a studio Mob that includes Dan Baird, Summar puts a twang-fired charge into these tunes, although "Supposed to Do" shows he also knows how to wrench a heart with a straight-up ballad. His only misstep: lovin' around with George Jones' immortal "He Stopped Loving Her Today."

###